

Here's a précis of my reply on Monday 20 July 2015 to the Vice Chancellor of the University of Queensland, where I graduated.

The three-page letter and supporting details are here: <http://bit.ly/1Lp9VZu>
Important sentences are in red for people in a hurry.

In his latest reply to my complaint, the UQ Vice Chancellor again provided no empirical evidence for his claim and UQ staff claims that carbon dioxide from human activity caused global warming or climate variability. Amazingly, the VC has implied that a UN IPCC report provides evidence of human causation when clearly it does not. My reply proves this to the VC and provides links for him/UQ to check the actual UN reports as I've done—twice. The VC contradicts actual data that show his staff fabricated a false 'consensus' where none exists, and he chooses to rely on a very dubious source.

As the VC requested, I have again provided the empirical evidence disproving the VC's and UQ's claims, this time with more detail. It's simple. I've provided links to responses from my Freedom of Information requests and responses from CSIRO and BOM head executives showing that neither agency has evidence of human causation. The VC's contradictions and inconsistencies are discussed. The enormous costs to people, state, nation and humanity of the VC's and staff's misrepresentations are listed.

UQ seems to be breaching two Queensland acts of legislation. The VC has science qualifications yet contradicts empirical evidence and makes false implied claims. He is a member of CSIRO's board, so if the CSIRO has suddenly found evidence of human causation he should be able to produce it. Amazingly for someone with his qualifications he presents no empirical evidence of causation and instead relies on unfounded appeals to authority, unscientific 'peer-review' and fabricated consensus.

There is no evidence that humans cause global warming or climate variability. I hope my letter assists people to understand how academics spread the politically driven climate claims using taxpayer funds to misrepresent climate and science. We pay doubly.
